Reimagining abundance in post-Covid-19 India

During the pandemic, food bloggers came up with a simple and potent idea. They asked what could be done to sustainably and affordably feed the world?

"Let's list some things that are abundant in India."

Lettuce, for one. vegetables that are abundant in India. If we succumb, will we return to the old normal, or an even older 19th century normal? Will the movements to build, and push aside hard-won environmental protection.

As people return to life and work post the lockdown, some predictions point to a mad rush to build.